EvilMrSod “The Gift”

Redemption is something Pablo Rivero aka EvilMrSod has never really been interested in. Up until now. His new album The Gift, released on February 18th on Keep It A Secret (GER) and Discos Delejos (SP) takes the howling and growling Country-Punk on the righteous path, well, at least somewhat. But it wouldn't be EvilMrSod if it didn't all start with a murder, followed by some drug use: “Murder Ballad” and “Crack Pipe” take you down to the bayou into a seedy blues joint where PJ Harvey hangs out with Howlin Wolf and Waylon Jennings, feet stomping and amps crackling.

“You Gotta Sin To Get Saved” EvilMrSod knows, so he at least got the first part covered, although the satanic gospel “(I've Seen The) Inverted Cross” leaves it kind of open, who will be his savior after all.

Without any unnecessary gloss and polish, EvilMrSod lets his songs shine in all their rustic glory, his crooning voice and steel-string always front and center while harmonicas, banjos, slide-guitars, stomp boxes and even a sitar make up the background orchestra. Although produced between Leipzig and Tenerife, you could swear this album was conceived and mixed somewhere between the Delta and Chi-Town. The Gift is a wild ride through Blues, Country, Gospel, Folk, despair, desire and satanic panic. And it just keeps on giving.
